

TERMS OF SERVICE

Last Updated: May 13, 2026

KOYOKI MUSIC BOT TERMS OF SERVICE

Parties and Acceptance

These Terms of Service ("Terms") go into effect when you add, configure, or use the Koyoki Music Bot ("Koyoki" or "Bot") on your Discord server. By inviting Koyoki to your server or using its commands, you are deemed to have fully accepted these Terms and Discord's own Terms of Service. If you do not agree, you must immediately remove Koyoki from your server.

Scope of Service and Interruptions

Koyoki is designed to provide music playback, playlist management, and related interactions in voice channels on the Discord platform. The Developer does not guarantee that the service will be 100% uninterrupted (uptime) or error-free. Temporary interruptions may occur due to scheduled maintenance or updates on the Discord API side.

User Obligations and Misuse

The following actions are strictly prohibited while using Koyoki's services:

- Sending intentional spam commands that will damage, overload, or crash the Bot's infrastructure.
- Violating Discord Developer Policies or Community Guidelines.
- Organizing the illegal distribution of copyrighted content through Koyoki.

Sanctions and Access Limitation

In the event that the Koyoki development team detects a violation of these Terms, it reserves the right to permanently (blacklist) or temporarily suspend the relevant user's or server's (Guild) access to the bot without prior notice.

Disclaimer

Koyoki is merely an intermediary that transmits data streams from third-party platforms to Discord voice channels. The bot developer cannot be held responsible for the nature, quality, or copyright status of the played audio content. No liability is accepted for any indirect, incidental, or punitive damages that may arise.

Changes

The Developer reserves the right to update these Terms without prior notice. When significant legal or functional changes are made, these updates will be announced through the bot's support server.